New Dimensions of Users Needs in Academic Libraries: Indian Perspectives

Muthumari, P., Chinnasamy, K. and Aravind, S.

sidha_nathan@yahoo.co.in

Abstract

This paper mainly focused on identifying the demand of the library user's in several aspects. Particularly, gathering information from various types of sources such as print, electronic and digital resources is diverse from individual user. At present scope of academic institutions introduce new courses for demands of the society. In this scenario library users of the institutions are also eager to enrich the knowledge in subject as well as apart from curriculum for their survival. Therefore, they expect more from libraries especially in the part of resource for update their knowledge. Even though the responsibility of the library professionals is help to access information from different type of resources like print or electronic.

Keywords: User needs, Academic libraries, India