

Archeological legacy: Udugampola sub kingdom

MWADN Wijesuriya<sup>1</sup>

When study history of Sri Lanka it can be seen tail of contemporary kingdoms. Some of among them were ruled by a Sub King under the guidance of main King. Such an administration area or division was called as a Sub kingdom. Udugampola Sub Kingdom is prominent amongst many archaeological sites in the Gampaha District.

The remaining archaeological sources such as Rajavaliya Battle of Alakeshwara provide proof for the fact that the king Sakala Kala Vallabha the son of VIII Veera parakramabahu who Kotte had ruled this as divisional kingdom that ran parred to the Kotte Kingdom. Ancient Uththarama-Raja Maha Vihara has been constructed where the king's place was back then, and the Royal Pond where the king bathed and the moat is still remnant.

However this legacy is diminishing with each day that passes. Even though prominent ancient kingdom like Anuradhapura and Polonnaruwa are subjected to discussion, ancient Sub kingdoms with an archeological value that are hidden from the spot light are forgotten or are subjected to limited discussion.

This paper is forwarded in a new point of view the remaining factors the archeological backdrop of this sub kingdom.

Key words: Sub Kingdom, Kotte Kingdom, Udugampola sub kingdom, VIII Veera Parakramabahu, King Sakala Kala Vallabha

<sup>1</sup> Faculty of Graduate Studies, University of Kelaniya, Sri Lanka